

SOUTH AFRICAN INVADERS OUT OF ANGOLA

In Angola today several thousand troops of the apartheid regime are occupying a huge area of southern Angola. The South African government no longer lies about their presence, in contrast to their blatant denials when South African troops first invaded Angola in the autumn of last year.

The apartheid regime has never shown any concern about the people of Angola. It is a racist regime which has nothing but contempt for black people. It supported the Portuguese colonialists in Angola and every day inflicts the misery and humiliation of apartheid on the black people of South Africa and Namibia.

What the South African racists are concerned about is the maintenance of white supremacy in Southern Africa. This is why they invaded Angola - and now they claim the right to stay in southern Angola to 'defend their borders' - which means to defend Namibia which they illegally occupy.

There can be no peace in Angola whilst the military forces of South Africa stay in Angola. If further bloodshed is to be avoided, international action must be taken to force South Africa's withdrawal.

The British Government should be taking all possible action to secure South Africa's withdrawal and to ban the recruitment of British mercenaries. If you support the cause of freedom in South Africa and peace in Angola, please act now and make your views known to the government, your MP, in your church, trade union....in fact anywhere you think it will help.
