Programme: 40p
Sonata in A major, op.99 for piano and cello

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN (1770-1827)

Allegro ma non tanto - Scherzo:Allegro molto-Adagio cantabile-Allegro vivace

The cello sonata in Beethoven's time was still a relatively unexplored medium. With the instrument's role in Baroque music limited to one of harmonic support, it took later composers some time to realize the potential of the cello as a solo instrument. Beethoven wrote five cello sonatas of which the A major is the third. The key of this work is significant: A major always finds Beethoven at his most a miable. The first movement alternates between a lyrical outpouring and a more urgent strain. The second movement is a vivacious Scherzo with great rhythmic energy supplied by the syncopations in the main theme. The slow movement is but a bridge to the finale. Beethoven ends the sonata with an exuberant movement full of rambunctious humour with much high-lying music for the cello.

Jardins sous la pluie from 'Estampes'

CLAUDE DEBUSSY (1862-1918)

Debussy is generally acknowledged as one of the great original minds of early twentieth century music. His fascination with colouristic possibilities of instruments, his use of Oriental scales, and his intentional blurring of formal outlines produce music at once individual and highly evocative. 'Jardins sous la pluie' (Gardens under rain) is one of many Debussy pieces based on the theme of water. The music also incorporates the melodies of two French songs.

Chaconne in D minor

BACH-BUSONI (1866-1924)

Busoni is little known today although in his lifetime he enjoyed a considerable reputation especially as a pianist. His belief that music should be 'an aristocratic art' led to the cultivation of a musical style lacking in popular appeal. His piano playing however was legendary. Boasting vast-sized hands, he played programmes of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin and Liszt which showed an artistry rare for its time. His love of Bach expressed itself in his many arrangements of the composer. The Chaconne—a variation form—is both expanded and intensified in Busoni's reworking.

Pezzo Capriccioso, op.62.

PETER ILYICH TCHAIKOVSKY (1840-93)

Tchaikovsky's life was a strange paradox of great successes in music and profound personal unhappiness. Unlike his Russian contemporaries, he modelled himself on Western composers and produced music sturdily constructed in a lyrical vein which still today has a universal appeal. The Pezzo Capriccioso written in 1887 is a virtuoso cello piece originally with orchestral accompaniment. A lyrical introduction leads into the main fast section which is played spiccato.

Elegy, op.24

GABRIEL FAURE (1845-1924)

At a time when French musical life was dominated by opera, Faure distinguished himself by becoming a prominent organist and choirmaster. His compositions include songs, sacred music and some chamber music. The Elegy for cello and piano of 1880 was written as a lament for an unrequited love. Its lyrical restraint and neatly conceived form typify much music of the composer.

Sonata in F major, op.99 for piano and cello

JOHANNES BRAHMS (1833-97)

Allegro vivace - Adagio affettuoso - Allegro passionato - Allegro molto

Brahms stands out among the late nineteenth century composers as one of the few who devoted a large part of their energies to the composition of chamber music. Taking Beethoven as his model he composed works which exude a warmth of feeling and show him a master-craftsman both in matters of form and treatment of instruments. The F major sonata is a mature work dating from 1886. It was dedicated to the cellist Robert Hausmann, a member of the famous Joachim quartet. Expanded melodies characterize much of the first two movements with frequent use of the sonorous low registers of both instruments. The third movement, a Scherzo, includes a theme from the finale of the third symphony, and shows the lighter side of Brahms's character. This lightness of mood is carried over into the finale and emphasized in the closing bars with the cello playing the main theme pizzicato.

FELIX SCHMIDT began his musical training with the French cellist Maurice Gendron, with whom he continued to study at the Yehudi Menuhin School and later at the Paris Conservatory. In 1976 he won the Muriel Taylor Award, and returning to London began work with William Pleeth.

Felix Schmidt has given recitals and concert performances in England, Germany, France, Holland and Switzerland. He has been invited to play concerts with the Stuttgart Philharmonic, the Royal Philharmonic, the Scottish National, the Bournemouth Symphony, the Berlin Radio Orchestra and Hilversum Radio Orchestra, the Zurich Chamber Orchestra, the Nouvel Orchestra de Chambre Français, and the World Youth Orchestra of Jeunesse Musicales. He has broadcast for radio and television on the continent and has made two records in Germany. Mr Schmidt performed the Brahms Double Concerto with Yehudi Menuhin in Berlin and at the Edinburgh Festival with the Scottish National Orchestra conducted by Sir Alexander Gibson. He has also played the Boccherini G Major Concerto and Tchaikovsky Rococo Variations in Switzerland conducted by the Rt. Hon. Edward Heath and was invited by Sir George Solti to take part in a concert with him at the Merchant Taylor's Hall in London. He recently formed a duo with Ingrid Jacoby with whom he has played concerts in England, Germany, France and America. The German Television Service made a documentary film about him which was screened nationally in 1982.

"He is one of the most outstanding young cellists of his generation."

YEHUDI MENUHIN

"......two soloists of incontestable greatness: the violinist Yehudi Menuhin and the cellist Felix Schmidt."

DIARIO - MADRID
INGRID JACOBY

"Clear articulation, bright tone, unequivocal phrasing, colour and meaningful graduation of dynamics. One felt all the time that Ms Jacoby's interests were centred on expressivity rather than mere technical accomplishment."

NEW YORK TIMES

"A beautiful tone, evenly measured and very expressive - a true artist."

THE MAIN POST - WEST GERMANY

INGRID JACOBY, the young and gifted American pianist, won the 1980/81 Concert Artists Guild Award, and made her New York debut at Carnegie Hall. She began her musical training with the Russian pianist, Larisa Gorodecka at an early age, and joined the St. Louis Conservatory when she was 13. One year later she won first prize in the Baldwin National Piano Competition and performed the Chopin F minor piano concerto under Leonard Slatkin, which resulted in an immediate engagement with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. After obtaining the highest honours at the Conservatory she went on to work with John Perry and graduated from the University of Southern California. In 1979 Ingrid Jacoby was awarded the Steinway Hall Artists Prize, won first prize in the USC Graduate Piano Competition, and was winner in the Gina Bachauer International Piano Competition.

Ingrid Jacoby has given many concert performances and recitals throughout the USA, and has frequently appeared on national radio and television as well as at the Aspen Music Festival. Since moving to London, Ms Jacoby has been invited to play at Glyndebourne House in the presence of the Prince and Princess of Wales and has played in England, Germany and France, including a broadcast for Berlin Radio and on ARD German Television with cellist Felix Schmidt, with whom she has formed a duo.
Nelson Mandela, leader of South Africa's liberation movement - the African National Congress - was sentenced to life imprisonment at the Rivonia Trial in June 1964. He was found guilty of planning acts of sabotage and making preparations for guerrilla warfare against the apartheid state.

Mandela explained his actions with these words from the dock:

"It was only when all else failed, when all channels of peaceful protest had been barred to us, that the decision was made to embark on violent forms of political struggle, and to form Umkhonto we Sizwe. We did so not because we desired such a course, but solely because the govenment left us with no other choice."

And in South Africa a life sentence for a political prisoner means imprisonment until death.
Nelson Mandela has been a key figure in South Africa's liberation struggle since the early 1940's. An attorney by profession, he was a founding member of the ANC Youth League. In 1952 he was the 'Volunteer in Chief' during the Defiance Campaign. Then, in 1956, he was charged with 155 others in the Treason Trial. After a trial lasting 5 years, all 155 were acquitted. The charges arose from the adoption, at the Congress of the People in 1955, of the Freedom Charter, which, the apartheid state argued, was High Treason. Its preamble states:

"We, the people of South Africa, declare for all our country and the world to know that South Africa belongs to all who live in it, black and white, and that no government can justly claim authority unless it is based on the will of all the people."

Following the Sharpeville massacre and the banning of the ANC and the PAC, Mandela played a key role in the founding of Umkhonto we Sizwe, which was to become the armed wing of the ANC. This marked a turning point in the history of the liberation struggle - a recognition of the inevitability of armed confrontation, a struggle which the United Nations General Assembly has overwhelmingly endorsed.

In April 1982, after nearly twenty years on Robben Island, Nelson Mandela and other ANC leaders were removed to Pollsmoor Prison in Cape Town. After a year at Pollsmoor Mandela, in a visit from his wife Winnie, decided to defy Prison Rules and asked Winnie to tell the world of the conditions in which he is now held. Mandela is now confined to a cell which he shares with four others, almost twenty four hours a day. The limited "exercise" he and the others are permitted is taken indoors. He has not seen daylight for over a year. Conditions in the cell are damp, and the overcrowding has made it impossible for him to continue his studies. But perhaps the most serious effect of the move has been to separate Mandela from others serving life sentences, such as Walter Sisulu and Govan Mbeki, with whom he has spent the last twenty years. The breaking up of these old and deep friendships, on top of the deteriorating conditions, is a truly vindictive and cruel act. Nelson Mandela told his wife during her March visit, "it is now clear that we were transferred for the purpose of further punishment and harassment". He also said that these conditions "are a threat to our lives."

The fate of Nelson Mandela and all South African political prisoners must be of concern to the whole world. There can be no real change and certainly no peace whilst the true leaders of South Africa are imprisoned, detained or in exile.

Since Mandela's imprisonment his wife, Nomzamo Winnie, has sought to continue the struggle to which he dedicated his life. She has been detained, tried, acquitted, then re-tried and acquitted, banned and constantly harassed by the security police. Currently she is banished to a remote location in the Orange Free State.

Winnie Mandela
A new international campaign for the release of Nelson Mandela was launched on 11 October 1982 by the United Nations with the support of organisations all over the world.

In April of this year the Free Nelson Mandela Co-ordinating Committee was formed to bring together the many organisations in Britain which believe that Nelson Mandela must be released.

There is much to be done by individuals and organisations:

* Support the international campaign for the release of Nelson Mandela
* Send a message to Nomzamo Winnie Mandela at 802 Brandfort Location, PO Brandfort 9400, Orange Free State, RSA
* Encourage any organisations that you are active in to support the campaign
* Raise the campaign with your MP and ask her/him to urge the government to intervene to secure the release of Nelson Mandela

* Send Nelson Mandela birthday greetings, his birthday is on July 18th, when he will be 65 years old. Cards should be addressed to: Nelson Mandela, Pollsmoor Prison, PBX 4, Tokai, 7946 Cape, South Africa. Special cards will be available from the co-ordinating committee.

* Come to the meeting to mark Mandela's birthday on Monday July 18th at 7.00pm, Royal Commonwealth Society, 18 Northumberland Ave, London.

* Contact the Free Mandela Campaign, c/o 15 Selous Street, London NW1 for further information
